Previous / Current Certification Details

In order to attend a one-day ALLMI Lorry Loader Operator course, in addition to the experience requirements mentioned below, candidates must have previously received accredited (i.e. not in-house) training in lorry loader operation. The ID card / certification associated with this training must not have expired more than six months prior to the date of the ALLMI Lorry Loader Operator course being undertaken (please note that in the absence of an expiry date being stated on the ID card / certification, the forthcoming ALLMI course must take place no later than five years and six months from the final day of the previously undertaken course). In addition to ALLMI, accrediting bodies accepted for this purpose are: AITT; CPCS; ITSSAR; Lantra; NPORS; RTITB. Other accrediting bodies / certificate types may be accepted, so please contact your ALLMI training provider for advice, if applicable.

In advance of the ALLMI Lorry Loader Operator course, your ALLMI training provider will request a copy of the ID card (front and back) or certification relating to this previous training and is required to provide said copy to ALLMI (unless the prior training was with ALLMI). A screenshot of an accrediting body online card checking facility will also be acceptable.
